

Research in our laboratory focuses on long-term evolution and survival of bacteria both in planktonic culture and biofilms, including applications to bacterial respiration, electricity production, and microbiome & microbial community structure. In this talk, I will focus on genomic analyses of adaptive evolution in long-term batch culture, with an emphasis on the molecular events that occur over time.